Account of the re-appearance of SICARD, teacher of the deaf and dumb in Paris.

Twenty-eight months had the man, whom the abbe de l'Epee chose for his immediate successor, the celebrated and modest Sicard, been the object of a proscription in which he was undeservedly included.

Concealed in the house of a trusty friend, who for two years risked his own life to save a head of such value, Sicard undertook the task to bestow with flowers the first studies of children, to facilitate their progress, and to render the performance of their duty easier to the fathers of families. In a narrow cell, by the light of a lamp, whose faint glimmer seemed loth to discover the venerable traits of the estimable recluse and to betray his place of refuge, he wrote his Universal Grammar; thus revenging himself on the injustice of men, only by heaping new benefits upon them.

In the mean time, the deaf and dumb of every age and sex lamented the absence of their teacher. Sometimes they looked up to the windows of their apartment, and their eyes were bedewed with tears: or they would regard with fixed attention the arm-chair where Sicard had been wont almost daily to expand souls, and render them susceptible of the impressions of nature: and of the significant and various gestures that at other times animated their countenances, the expressions of dejection and sorrow alone remained. One of them in particular, Jean Massieu, the fifth of the same family who had enjoyed the instructions of the venerable Sicard, was so affected by the loss of his teacher, that to pacify him they were obliged to make him acquainted with his place of refuge. This young man, whose understanding and talents all Paris admires, and who, notwithstanding his weak state of health had been promoted to the place of repetiteur in the school, with a salary of 1200 francs, repeatedly offered to share his small income with Sicard: "My father (said he by means of rapid signs) has nothing: I must provide him with food and clothing and save him from the cruel fate that oppresses him." He accordingly took the necessary steps with prudence, engaged some of his friends to assist him in putting his intentions into execution, and kept himself in readiness to lay hold of the first favorable opportunity. At length the already wished-for moment arrived. A dramatic poet, whom the enthusiasm of his heart rendered courageous (Bouilly) founded the resolution to interest the public in favor of the successor of the abbe de l'Epee, by producing on the stage a memorable scene from the life of that celebrated founder of the institution for instructing the deaf and dumb. The undertaking was dangerous but the motive irresistible. The audience shed tears to the memory of the abbe de l'Epee; and whilst his sainted name was repeated, the unfortunate Sicard's likewise resounded. O! that from his asylum he could have heard these affecting exclamations of a numerous and respectable assembly, this consoling burst of enthusiasm from a people which paid homage to virtue, and pleaded the cause of innocence. "Sicard!" they exclaimed from every side, "restore to us Sicard!"

From the emotion that animated every countenance, from the applause that was clapped from every hand, and especially from the indescribable transports of the author (Bouilly) it was easy for Massieu, notwithstanding his deafness and dumbness, to form an idea of the interest which the audience expressed in favor of the preceptor; and he so well contrived matters, that a few days after, he and Bouilly met together at the house of a legislator, who is a friend of men and merit, and of the unfortunate, and where a brother of the chief consul of the French republic happened to be on a visit. Having here, by the affecting answers which he gave to the questions put to him, softened the hearts of a great number of persons to a participation of his feelings, he gave to the brother of the consul a letter which he had written in his presence, and which concluded with the following remarkable words: "Promise, O promise me! that you will speak for us to the chief consul—they say he loves those men who labor for the happiness of others; surely then he must love Sicard whose sole happiness it is to render the poor deaf and dumb happy!"

This touching language of nature excited the admiration of all present, and produced the most lively emotion. Massieu observed this; immediately he flung one arm round the neck of Joseph Bonaparte, and the other round Bouilly, and all three melted into tears. Joseph Bonaparte, who was most affected, pressed the amiable pupil of Sicard to his heart, and requested his worthy friend to signify to him, that he would on the same evening present his letters to the consul; and that he could venture to promise him that it would have the wished for effect.

Massieu's hopes were not disappointed, the consul ordered Sicard's name to be erased from the list of the proscribed; and soon after he was restored to the right of again giving instructions to his pupils. The 14th of February 1800, was the day in which this good father appeared again in the midst of his children.

It was about 11 in the morning: already was the hall appropriated for the public exercises of the deaf and dumb filled with celebrated men; among whom, those in particular were observed who dedicate their talents and labors to the instruction of youth, and the promotion of the happiness of the human race. In the midst of the hall stood the deaf and dumb pupils, of both sexes and different ages. The vivacity of their looks and the rapidity of their signs, by which they mutually communicated their sentiments, indicated that this day was the happiest of their life.

The friends of the venerable proscriber, among whom was likewise the excellent man who had sheltered him from the storm of party rage, enter the hall in crowds, and a number of beautiful ladies embellished the company by the lustre of their charms.

At once a penetrating cry of joy escapes Massieu—every one rises up; a respectful silence reigns throughout the whole assembly; Sicard appears—Massieu is already in his arms—his mouth is joined to the mouth of Sicard; his whole soul seems to be transfused into the soul of his preceptor—he takes him by the hand and conducts him to his chair. Immediately the male pupils rush towards him. The more adult among them surround their adored master, press him to their hearts, and hold him in their arms. The little ones kiss his hands, cling to his garment, and climb up to his breast and his head. He is covered with the most affecting signs, with the tears of the adults and of the children.

Sicard endeavours to speak, but his emotion deprives him of the power of utterance. He wishes to communicate to each of his pupils what passes in his heart, but all at once fix their eyes upon him, embrace him, caress him; to extend over them his beneficent hands, to tell by signs that he loves them all with the paternal affection, that he receives them all into his bosom, is all that he has power to do; all that the blissful intoxication of his soul inspires him with.

As however, nothing escapes his penetrating glance, he observed that his female pupils, restrained by the bashfulness peculiar to their sex, venture not wholly to give way to the emotions which irradiates from their eyes, and glows in every feature of their expressive countenances. Affected by this struggle of modesty and sentiment, he goes towards them, stops for a moment, then stretches out his arms & receives their caresses with a tone that seems to say, "should a father blush to embrace his children?"

While these bashful maidens are expressing to their teacher the joy which his return occasions them, the boys who have made the greatest progress approach the table, and delineate with letters of fire, and the rapidity of lightning the emotions which animate them. One of them thanks the consul and his brother for having restored to them the man from whom they received their moral existence; another describes the anxiety and melancholy with which they were overwhelmed during the absence of their beloved preceptor; a third writes down the sentence "that virtue and truth sooner or later will triumph over the artifices of the wicked." At last Massieu himself appears at the table, and while he presents to the eyes of the admiring spectators the profoundest truths of the physical and moral sciences, a blooming maiden places on the head of Sicard, a wreath of poppies and heliotropes, emblems of the sadness of his pupils during his absence, and of the immortality with which his genius, his patience, his beneficent labors, will be crowned.

The following is from the London Morning Post of the 3d of May.

From the MONITEUR.

PARIS, April 22.

THE Mannheim Courant, and some other papers in the North, already teem with false reports, and seem to rejoice in the apprehension of a new opportunity to mislead Europe with false and ridiculous misrepresentations of the gigantic power of Russia. They of course would make it appear, that Dalmatia is inundated with Russian troops, and that a very respectable army is collected near the mouths of the Cataro. At St. Petersburg, probably, they would form better plans for a campaign than these. If it were not that France insisted upon the fulfilment of the late treaty with Austria, and upon receiving the mouths of the Cataro from the hands of Austria, the Russians would have been rejected ere now, and tranquility restored; but the the Dalmatian provinces must be delivered up to the French by the Austrians; and the French will not receive them from any other hands. The mouths of the Cataro are separated from Dalmatia by the state of Ragusa, to the extent of about thirty miles, so that the possession of Cataro is quite unconnected with that of Dalmatia. The French are masters of the whole of Dalmatia and Istria, where they have upwards of thirty thousand men; the Russians at this moment have not more than three battalions at Cataro, making in the whole about 1500 men, and not one soldier beyond that number. When general Brady surrendered the forts to the Russians by an act of base treachery, he found the regiment of Thorn in the place of 1600 strong, and this general delivered the forts up to 300 Russians, who were landed from two frigates.

The indignation of some of the officers of that regiment was then at the highest pitch, M. Ghislieri was so base as to write to these officers, for the purpose of allaying their resentment, and reconciling them to the surrender of the forts. These officers, reckoning upon the esteem of the French soldiers, afterwards published the Marquis's letter, adding the assertion, that the ports above mentioned were sold by the Marquis & gen. Brady. On the same day that the marquis wrote the aforesaid letter to the Austrian officers, he wrote another to gen. Mollitor. M. Ghislieri, and those who had given him orders, sold their master and their country in the same manner as when the second coalition was formed. One would think it was time to adopt that conduct that would ensure peace, and not continue to seek for motives of eternal discord, in contemptible subterfuges. We by no means doubt, but when these letters come to the knowledge of the War Department at Vienna, proper punishment will be inflicted upon those who have been capable of such perfidious conduct.

The following observations appear in a Note upon the foregoing article:

"An account of the circumstances that attended the surrender of the mouths of the Cataro to the Russians, adds, to several particulars already known, that neither the marquis Ghislieri, nor the Austrian commandant, protested against the entrance of a Russian squadron into the port, though, at the same time, they were waiting in expectation of the French; and the consequence of this conduct they also exposed the French, who were on their way thither, to the danger of falling into the hands of their enemies, when they might have supposed they were entering a friendly port. The said gentlemen also, had taken no measures for repelling the attack of the Montenegrins. It is likewise repeated that the following officers had protested against the conduct of their commandant; that some of them were put under an arrest on this account, but were liberated in consequence of the remonstrances of their brother officers: that the marquis Ghislieri, seeing the officers were determined to resist any attack on the part of the Russians, said that he had orders from his superiors for surrendering the forts of Cataro to the Russians; and that the Russians were even invited by the Austrian commandant to take possession of Cataro, for which they had no orders from their own court, and which could only be approached by the Russian squadron, under command of H. Beyle, an Englishman; lastly, that the Russian commandant at Corfu being applied to for assistance in this affair, refused it, being unwilling to act without orders from his court.

"In the letter written by the Marquis to the Austrian officers, he says, the place is not considered as being summoned by a hostile power, and much less by the Montenegrins, but by the repeated claims of a Russian Commandant; that he had chosen for himself the part of causing his Majesty's troops to withdraw from Catara; and this, in consequence of its being the desire of a Court in friendship & alliance with the House of Austria, relative to which he had express orders, from high authority, which enjoined him to take no other steps than those of protests and declarations; that he had entered into no terms of capitulation with the Russian Commandant, having bound himself to nothing more than the necessary protests and declarations, for the purpose of justifying the court of Austria, against any complaint on the part of the French, that the affair could not possibly be attended with any disagreeable consequences to himself, nor by any means tend to impeach the bravery of the officers, &c.

"The letter of the Marquis Ghislieri to Gen. Mollitor, in which he magnifies the forces of the Russians and Montenegrins, asserts that they were approaching the Austrian garrisons on all sides, threatening the whole province with destruction if any resistance should be made; then adds, that, finding all his protestations ineffectual in convincing them of the impropriety of their conduct, he was compelled to yield to the previous circumstances, though with his master's brave troops he hoped to have been able to serve, the Province of Catara in its present condition for the emperor of the French, &c.

"A note was presented on the 25th of March by Gen. Lauriston, Commissioner in Dalmatia to the Marquis Ghislieri, who was charged with the cession of Venetian Dalmatia. In this Note Gen. Lauriston asserts, that the regiment of Thorn would willingly have defended the place, and had shown much reluctance in quitting it. The Gen. also put the question to the Marquis, whether he has surrendered Catara from his own motives, or whether he had acted according to superior orders, as it was of much importance to the general to inform his government of the facts. He further asked, why Catara was surrendered to the Russians; and remarks upon the absurdity of pretending to preserve Catara in a flourishing state, as the Montenegrins had scarcely been two days in the place, before they began to murder and plunder the inhabitants who had armed themselves, and come to blows with their strangers."

"Contrary to the assertion in the above letter, the Marquis de Ghislieri, states, in the correspondence, that he had orders to give up to the Russians all the forts, and territory of the mouths of the Cataro." That "it was only in consequence of the reiterated summons of a Russian Commandant, that he had taken the resolution of withdrawing the troops of his majesty; and consequently it was only by the express wish of a Court in friendship and alliance with his own, against which superior orders were very precisely not to use other means than those of declarations & protests, & never any measures of armed defence"—"that the part he had taken was a measure purely political, and the only one which circumstances permitted, and not a measure in any respect military;" that "the province was invaded by thousands of furious Montenegrins, who were in motion to attack the fort; and at that moment the Commandant of the Russian squadron, summoned the governor of Catara to give up all the forts, or to declare himself the enemy of his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, and the next day he reiterated the same summons, in the peremptory demands of half an hour, always, according to the principle, that the Mouths of the Catara were already French territory, from the day that the delay of two months fixed for their occupation by the French troops had expired."

NEW-YORK, June 21.

"Captain Connell, from St. Thomas, informs that intelligence he has received there from a correct source, that Miranda's two schooners had been captured and carried into a small port in the island of Lagaira, and that according to report, the general himself had landed at Bonaire, where he was erecting fortifications. The officers and privates were marched to Caraccas, where it was supposed they would be imprisoned until the pleasure of the Spanish government should be known—Two French frigates remained at Porto Rico.

A gentleman who arrived here yesterday from Lagaira, furnishes the following information:

"He left the city of Caraccas on the 14th of May, and Lagaira on the 21st of May. At the time he sailed, (21st May) they had no positive accounts of Miranda at Lagaira but supposed him from their last accounts to be at the island of Bonaire.

"A government armed brig and schooner had been dispatched from Lagaira, in search of the Leander, and an embargo laid for ten days. They had returned without falling in with her.

"It was reported at Caraccas and Lagaira, that two schooners had been captured and carried into Porto Cavello, but that the gentleman took every pains to obtain a correct information on the subject, he could never come at the truth nor learn their names, nor the names of the captains. It appeared however certain that two schooners were captured and carried into Porto Cavello, but whether they were Miranda's or not, he could not learn with any degree of certainty. The former reports of a number of people in the province of Caraccas, having been arrested and hung on suspicion of being connected with Miranda were untrue. The report of the crews of the schooners having been marched to Caraccas was also maintained at Porto Cavello. It is no doubt but Miranda desires to distribute his property to the country, and in circulation some few of his discharged. He says that much disaffected, and if in making good his landing numbers will join him, but dare not speak. The governor Caraccas had been much alarmed appeared to be surprised.

"He was boarded in the British schooner the Hercules man of war, from them of Miranda, the last accounts they had from Bonaire. He also says with a British governor from Jamaica, the count him that there were a vessel at Jamaica ready to sail the moment they had counts from him."

From the above it appears on the 21st of May, Miranda effected a landing; but from on the coast, we may expect a val will bring some positive that subject.

A letter was received in from St. Thomas, dated 2 states general Miranda, had fallen in with a Spanish 18 pounders, off Porto Cavello, severe engagement, effecting throwing his guns overboard, also mentions the capture of schooners, in one of which col. Smith.

By the arrival at Newbury on night of the ship Washington 40 day from Caraccas, we learn verbally, that a few sailed, there was a battle the Swedes and Prussians the former are said to be preparations.

Captain W. has likewise numbers of the Altona 24th and 25th April from which articles are translated.

There has been no attack the corps of Swedish advanced Prussian infantry, Lubeck, and Lauenburg, were some killed and wounded.

Two Swedish frigates roads here to day to the Ne cutters some days before.

By private accounts from have gained belief the pope resign, and Cardinal Fesch his stead and take his residence; but the estates of the posed to the kingdom of Italy. They say likewise that the Eturia will be a federal France.

The Danish Consul in received a note, from the Pignatelli, stating that it would be no obstacle to the East coast of Naples, from their cargoes.

PHILADELPHIA,

OF MIRANDA

In addition to the following letter, we learn by that the two schooners were Porto Cavello, and that the Extract of a letter from 15th May.

"Ever since the departure Miranda from New York, v ed his motions, and observations at Jacquemel. On the he appeared on the coast with Leander and two schooners and the Bee. He landed 5 on the same day he was at vessels of war; he sustained with courage for a moment, a dastardly manner, after part of his military stores.

Twenty Dollars Reward,
WILL be given for apprehending and securing in jail, a young mulatto man five, named ANDREW. He was hired by me last year to Mr. Joseph Thomas, who keeps the mil-dle ferry opposite to Alexandria, and absconded from that place about the latter end of August last. He is about 23 years of age, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, luffy and well made, has short curled hair, and is frequently subject to have feveral large pimples in his face. He is reckoned to be a sensible fellow, of an easy agreeable address for a man in his low sphere of life. As he has not been heard of by me since his elopement, I suspect he has had the address to ship himself as a freeman on board some vessel either at Alexandria or Baltimore. Whoever takes him up and secures him in any jail, shall receive from me the above reward, as soon as due information thereof is given to me or to Doctor N. P. Can-tin, at Port Tobacco.

Runaway Negro JACK.
Ran away from the subscriber, living in Pimkeny Neck, Charles county, Maryland, on the 15th of last June, a Negro man, named JACK, about 50 years of age, and about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches high, luffy and well made, his voice in common loud, and bold in his looks and manner. I don't know any thing that would make a stranger suspect Jack's elopement sooner than that of calling himself a Baptist, and fond of argument.
JACK came from Guinea when he was about 12 or 13 years of age. There is a fear on the back of one of his hands occasioned by a burn or scald while an infant, it must be discovered by strict notice; each of his shins are flame-colored about 4 or 5 inches in length and better than one inch broad in different places.
Whoever brings said Jack home, or secures him in jail that I get him again, shall receive Twenty Dollars for the first 20 miles, Thirty Dollars for 30 miles, or Forty Dollars for 50 miles, and One Shilling for each mile after, and reasonable charges paid by RICHARD BRANDT.
May 30.

THE above Negro Jack eloped from me better than twelve months past, and was brought home by one of Judge Washington's overseers, with a safe and recommendation signed by Thomas Teas, Middle River Neck, Baltimore county, dated May 23, 1805. Jack then called himself Thomas Harris.

VALUABLE FAMILY
MEDICINES.
Just received direct from the Patentees, and
FOR SALE BY JAMES KENNEDY, JUN.
DRUGGIST,
The following Valuable Medicines:
Dr. Rawson's Anti-Bilious and Stomach Bitters.

PREPARED BY
THOMAS H. RAWSON,
Member of the Connecticut Medical Society.
THESE Bitters have undoubtedly had the most rapid sale of any Patent Medicines ever before discovered, and are justly appreciated for their singular and uncommon virtues for curing weak and decayed constitutions, and all that train of complicated complaints so common in the spring and fall seasons, such as intermittent Fevers and Agues, long Autumnal Fevers, Dy-sentries, &c. They are also a very pleasant bitter for common use, and where they are known they have taken the place and superseded the use of all other bitters in public houses as well as in private families.—Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Lee's (Windham) Billious Pills.
THIS great sale and increasing demand for these valuable pills for these twelve years past, bespeak their intrinsic worth. They have proved singularly efficacious in Billious and Yellow Jaundice, Head Aches, Dysenteries, Bilious Colic, Colic winds, Female complaints, &c.
The very great demand and high esteem which these pills are held throughout the United States and the West Indies, has induced many to counterfeit them; the purchaser is requested to observe that the name of Samuel Lee, jun. (the patentee) is affixed to each bill of directions, in his own hand writing, or they will not be genuine. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Itch Ointment.
A certain and safe application for that disagreeable complaint called the ITCH. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Anti-Bilious Pills, or, Family Physic.
The extraordinary celebrity these pills have gained, the universal demand for them and the valuable effects which they are held by medical men of the first eminence, are sufficient testimonials of their intrinsic worth. In great colds and sudden attacks of disorders, an early use of these pills often produces the happiest effects, and taken once in eight or ten days in cases of indigestion, headache, diseases, pains in the stomach and bowels, dysen-teries, diarrhoeas, dropsies, &c. and a liberal use of my anti-bilious bitters in the intermediate time has relieved patients almost to a miracle—price 25 cents a box.

Thompson's Aromatic Tooth Paste,
For the curvy in the teeth and gums, and for whitening and preserving the teeth. It likewise takes off all disagreeable smells from the breath, which generally arises from scorbutic humors and bad teeth. This paste is much in use, and highly esteemed by all those who value the preservation of their teeth; it may be applied at all times with the greatest safety. It is neatly put up in pewter boxes with paper directions. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Worm Powders.
A medicine which for efficacy and safety is in operation stands unrivalled. The most authenticated proofs and respectable authorities of its astonishing virtues, and surprising effects, in extreme and alarming cases of worms, may be had at the place of sale. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Cooley's Vegetable Elixar
Or Cough Drops,
For Coughs, Colds, Asthmas, Spitting of blood, and all diseases of the Lungs. Its merits need no allied. Price 50 cents a bottle.

Dr. Cooley's Rheumatic Pills,
Price 50 cents a box.
Hinkley's Infallible remedy for the Piles.
Price 50 Cents a Box.
Very particular directions accompanying each of these valuable medicines.

He has likewise for Sale,
A general assortment of Drugs, Patent Medicines, Shop furniture and Vials; a few handsome Hall Lamps; Indian Shades; proof with Essence of Spruce; Patent Blacking; Madeira and Sherry wine; black bottles in hogsheads paints ground in oil; and a few barrels of seed Oil, which he will sell on reasonable terms for cash, or to punctual customers on a short credit.
A generous allowance will be made to those who purchase the above Medicines by the dozen.
